To all Parents/Carers,

Happy Rockstar Day! To support the NSPCC's Numbers Day we have been getting heavily involved with all things Rock and Roll today!

Top left is one of many photos on Twitter of the children in their best costumes having fun with numbers! Thank you to all parents/carers for your support, we have definitely raised a good chunk of money for the NSPCC 😊

Middle left, which is something we have started trialing, is a photo of a Y6 child reading a story to Miss Hawley's class. Other Y5 and Y6 children got involved too (check out Twitter) and it was incredibly popular with everyone involved – it's fair to say they were captivated! Well done to our Y5 and Y6 children for stepping forward and having a go!

Bottom left we have children in Y4 practicing singing 'Alouette' in French. The children really enjoy learning French in school and we have some extremely proficient linguists!

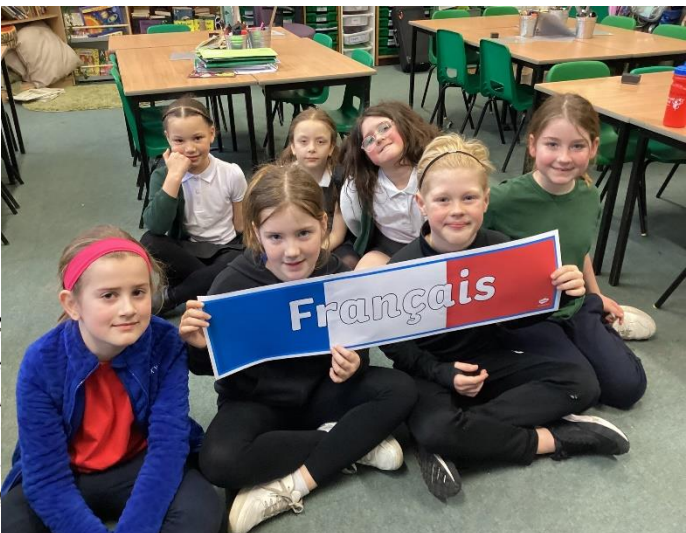

In other news, and this is one of my favourite stories of the week, the children who run the Healthy Tuckshop have earned enough money to have a re-brand of their business. They've selected a new colour scheme for the trolley, new baskets for the fruit and some fake foliage to decorate. This is all to generate new enterprise, create more income and keep their customers happy – some proper entrepreneurs at Markeaton! Photos to follow when the re-brand is complete.

And finally, in case you missed it, the Royal Academy of Arts have opened their Young Artists competition again. There is an email going out tonight with further details so get involved, let's try and make it another year where work is exhibited in London!
